GERMANY FACES STARVATION; FAILURE OF THIS YEAR'S CROP MIGHT MAKE HER SURRENDER

Gerard's Suite Says Hope Is Entertained for Big Crops, With Which They Do Not Believe Nation Can Be Crushed by Allies.

What Ambassador Gerard and his aids will have to report of conditions in Germany on their return has been a matter of acute interest since the break in relations. A fellow passenger with Mr. Gerard on the Infanta perious matter of bomb plots. Fedleabel, from Corunna to Havana, was Ross D. Whytock of The Evening World staff. What Mr. Whytock tells is a close reflection of the views of what Mr. Gerard and his aids will tell the high officials of the Government.

HAVANA, March 12.-The German Empire has just entered the most serious period of its existence and the future, even to the most optimistic. is shrouded by fear. The shadow of famine hangs over the land, and, confident as she is in her military and naval prowess, Germany regards the next four months as the crucial epoch during which her fate shall be es-

If Germany can survive the next four months with regard to food it is felt that she cannot be defeated. The period during which grim want will stalk through the land will terminate with the beginning of the harvest season or the middle of July.

Although it is generally conceded that Germany's food problem is a desperate one, it has been calculated with German thoroughness that she can just squeeze through until midsummer with her present supplies. However, should the calculators have been in error with regard to available foodstuffs, starvation in its most terrible form will encompass them and during the next four months there will be great suffering throughout Germany, and hundreds are expected to die of starvation.

Even though the harvest be a failure, Germany is determined to go on, even in the face of terrors that would set the world a-shuddering. If the harvest is a success, and the early indications are that it will be, Germany will have solved her food problem for at least another year.

Among the plans in the event of a harvest failure, which Ambassador Gerard and other American officials who were in Germany have heard proposed, is one which contemplates letting the populations of territory determine now occupied by Germany shift for themselves.

If the Allies seek to starve out Germany and the situation becomes acute, the empire will be compelled to resort to drastic means. One of the first steps which would be taken would be to send all the old men. women and children into Switzerland. Norway, Sweden and Holland. Then, they say, if no relief is had, the food which is now being consumed in the territories occupied by Germany would be diverted to her own population. There are 11,000,000 Poles in Russian territory held by Germany.
